

Conserving and regenerating forests and soils to mitigate climate change

Anne-Marie Codur, PhD
GDAE Research Fellow

---

Can the world meet the ambitious Paris goals and avoid catastrophic climate change? An important solution is beneath our feet.

The earth's soils possess a massive capacity to remove and store carbon from the atmosphere. Scientists argue that if we efficiently mobilize all natural carbon sinks, we can find the path to reverse global climate change.

---

Brown Bag Lunch Series

Bring your lunch and join us:

Wednesday, Dec 6
12:30-1:30

Mugar 200, The Fletcher School
160 Packard Ave, Medford, MA

Global Development And Environment Institute
at Tufts University

